PUBLIC SITE RELEASE • BOUNDED BROWSER VERIFICATION

The work

The September 16 update increased text size, widened the request form and anchored the eye to a shared SVG coordinate. The visual identity and approved résumé PDF were preserved.¹

Acceptance and rollback

An earlier layout was rejected. PR #12 restored it while keeping PDF-only downloads; PR #13 then applied the requested readability changes. The rollback remains visible in the release record.^{1,2}

Check instrument	Observed result
Chromium, 26 HTML paths × 2 widths	52 loaded-page observations; no horizontal document overflow or visible DOM text below 14px.
Widths / viewport height	375px and 1440px; height 960px.
Eye geometry	160px; center error below 0.02px in three tested widths, before/after scrolling.
Request form	640px maximum; 335px at 375px viewport.

Limits

Excluded: authenticated states, remote applications, hidden controls and canvas text. No access request, email-delivery test or approval was performed. Local status calls were stubbed offline; screenshots do not prove estate availability.

Observed page captures

Actual local Chromium captures from the tested release, not design mockups. The two desktop views below show the anchored eye and the widened form; the OFFLINE status in the Gate capture was deliberately stubbed for safe local testing.

Responsive checks

The same pages were inspected at 375px width. Text and controls wrap rather than requiring horizontal scrolling. The evidence applies to the observed states, not every possible form submission or backend response.
